

The traffic and weather stations are the best I have ever used. The up to the minute broadcasts of traffic conditions has saved me hours, literally. I am currently working a midnight shift in the Philadelphia area. If you are from this area or have ever travelled here you know that the traffic is as unpredictable as the weather. I have run into traffic jams at 3,4 and 5 in the morning, before I had XM radio. Now I have the ability to avoid such hassels. Not to mention that I just bought a new convertible and the weather reports help me stay dry. I think that it is a shame that the NAB is trying to stop these services. Is the NAB afraid of a little competition? I hope that the NAB, with such strong members like Clear Channel, does not win this battle. Thank you for considering my views.
